Stretching from the vast wilderness of Algonquin Park in the east to the rugged windswept shores of the Georgian Bay Islands in the west, the District of Muskoka includes the treasured towns of Gravenhurst, Bracebridge and Huntsville, and the townships of Georgian Bay, Lake of Bays and Muskoka Lakes. With its rugged beauty, pristine lakes, and quaint settlements, Muskoka is indeed both a tourist destination and a cottager's playground. "Muskoka" translates from the Algonquin native language to "land of the red earth." Unforgettable sunsets, stunning autumn tree foliage, and the region's signature crop of cranberries, all relate back to the "red earth" theme and becomes the canvas for this stunning photography collection.

Canadian photographer MIKE GRANDMAISON has been working in the field for many years. His images have been published in numerous prestigious magazines and periodicals. His previous books include Canada (with Shelagh Rogers), Georgian Bay and The Canadian Rockies. He lives in Winnipeg, Manitoba.
